Microeconomic Studies Division

The Congressional Budget Office (CBO) is a small nonpartisan agency that provides economic and budgetary analysis to the Congress. The Microeconomic Studies Division is seeking one or more labor economists in the Employment and Income Security Unit to analyze the budgetary and economic effects of a broad range of federal programs and policies.

The Employment and Income Security Unit conducts research and analysis on topics of interest to the Congress. Those include labor markets, income, poverty, cash and in-kind assistance programs, disability policies, education and training, and immigration. Ongoing and recently completed work includes reports analyzing the effect of changing the minimum wage on employment and family income; assessing options for increasing income mobility among low-income households; examining trends in spending for means-tested programs; and evaluating options for federal student loan programs.

The successful candidate will contribute to the full range of the division’s responsibilities. Those include using survey data to conduct economic analyses and writing CBO reports and testimonies. Staff members are encouraged to actively participate in the policy research community by presenting papers at conferences, publishing articles in professional journals, and circulating preliminary research through CBO’s working paper series.

Qualifications
Applicants must have either a Ph.D. in economics or a related discipline or a Master’s degree in those fields and equivalent experience. They should also have strong quantitative skills and have the ability to initiate and complete research projects independently and as part of a team. Finally, they should possess a desire to work on issues of current and potential interest to the Congress and an ability to effectively communicate their work to nontechnical audiences orally and in writing.

Salary and Benefits
Salary is competitive and will be commensurate with experience, education, and other qualifications. CBO offers excellent benefits and an appealing work environment.

How to Apply
Please submit a cover letter, résumé, a brief writing sample, unofficial transcripts, salary history, and contact information for three (3) references at www.cbo.gov/careers. Recent Ph.D. graduates must submit an unofficial copy of academic transcripts and have letters of recommendation sent to careers@cbo.gov in place of references. Only complete applications will be considered. This position is governed by the Veterans Employment Opportunities Act, as made applicable by the Congressional Accountability Act, as amended.
